The Chair's focus areas in research and teaching include topics in Applied Microeconomics, Personnel Economics, Game Theory, Contract Theory, Behavioural and Organizational Economics.

Your profile:

- Master (MSc, MRes, or Diploma) Degree or close to completion (270-300 ECTS credits) in Economics, Business, Mathematics, or related fields and excellent grades;
- A strong interest in economics and the Chair's research and teaching areas;
- Strong methodological and analytical skills, in particular a solid knowledge of quantitative methods in economics analysis;
- Teamwork capabilities, ability to work independently, and willingness to take on responsibility;
- Excellent communication skills and excellent knowledge in English (knowledge in German is not required).

Your responsibilities:

- Conducting high-quality research on topics related to the Chair's focus areas;
- Supporting the Chair in research and teaching;
- Writing a cumulative dissertation and completing the School's doctoral program;
- Teaching in the School's BSc and/or MSc programs (tutorials; 14 TU per semester);
- Supervising academic student papers and theses.

We offer:

- Structured, goal-oriented doctoral studies and intense support;
- Diversified and flexible work assignments;
- Funding for the participation in international conferences;
- Teaching experience and support in teaching;
- Unique culture, flat hierarchies, an international team of young researchers, and access to our international network.

Please send your application including a short letter of motivation, a detailed curriculum vitae, recent transcripts and credentials, a list of working papers (if applicable), at least one academic reference, and a copy of your Master thesis via e-mail to:
